5. The following individual leaders of the various unions comprise the executive board of the Comité Pro Defensa Derechos Laborales (CPDDL): Angelica Trigueros, Pedro Grande, Rafael Blanco, Jr., Rafael Antonio Coto, J. Inocente Guerrero, Pablo Arauz, and Eligio Canales. The membership of the CPDDL is composed of all the delegates from the twenty-three Communist-controlled unions mentioned above.
6. The unions are always in need of money, since they are being continuously "raided" by union activities. Secretaries of Finance of the various unions have the most difficult tasks and are constantly resigning from their jobs. The Executive Committee, however, is said to approve of the rapid turn-over of financial secretaries, as they consider that any fraud or swindling can be more easily detected in this manner.
7. In the political field, the Communists are accelerating their international obligations and are appointing persons with international experience to the more important posts, which are now occupied by "professionals" and not by workers. The following men are considered by source to compose the Politburo of the Communist Party of El Salvador: Moises Castro Morales, Thony Vassiliu, Rafael B. Cisneros, Miguel Angel Flores, Rodolfo Jimenez Barrios, and Gabriel Pilonio Araujo.
8. It seems certain that Dr. Thony Vassiliu is in contact with Colonel Rafael Carranza Amaya,¹ and probably with other high military officers. The Communists are attempting to reach an agreement with Colonel Carranza Amaya in the formation of a political party to overthrow the present government.

25X1A

1. Comment. Colonel Rafael Carranza Amaya is now Inspector General of the Salvadoran Army. He has a history of being ambitious and of being involved in revolutionary activities and in political cliques within and without the Army. It is not believed therefore that the Colonel has a very bright military future under the present government. In view of this, it is conceivable that Carranza Amaya might be interested in siding with the Communists.
